

An eye ulcer - a wound on the surface of the eye that causes painful, weepy, red, inflamed eyes.

Something irritating in their eye - such as smoke, dust, sand, wind, a grass seed, or a cat's claw!.

Eyelash disorders - eyelashes that rub on the surface of the eye often cause pain, redness and swelling.

Eyelid disorders - inward or outward turning eyelids often cause pain, redness and swelling/ inflammation.

Glaucoma – increased pressure inside the eye. An eye with glaucoma is usually red, inflamed, cloudy and larger than normal.

Exposure keratitis - a condition common in flat-faced dogs such as the Shih Tzu, Pug and Bulldog because their bulging eyes prevent proper blinking. Exposure keratitis causes the front of the eye to become dry and inflamed.

Uveitis - inflammation of structures inside the eye causes changes in the shape, size or colour of the iris.

Masses and tumours - often cause irritation and inflammation.

When to contact your vet

Contact your vet for an appointment as soon as you notice anything wrong with your dog's eyes, if they seem to be in pain, ask your vet for an urgent appointment. A delay in treatment could lead to much more serious problems and even loss of vision / blindness.
